

ARTICLE VII:

You do not have the right to the possessions of others. If you rob, cheat or coerce away the goods or services of other citizens, don't be surprised if we decide to send you to a place where you still won't have the right to a big-screen color TV or a life of leisure.

ARTICLE VIII:

You don't have the right to demand that our children risk their lives in foreign wars to soothe your aching conscience. We hate oppressive governments and won't lift a finger to stop you from going to fight if you would like. However, we do not enjoy parenting the entire world, and do not want to spend so much of our time battling each and every little tyrant with a military uniform and a funny hat.

ARTICLE IX:

You don't have the right to a job. All of us sure want all of you to have one, and will gladly help you along in hard times, but we expect you to take advantage of the opportunities of education and vocational training laid before you to make yourself useful.

ARTICLE X:

You do not have the right to happiness. Being an American means that you have the right to pursue happiness-which by the way, is a lot easier if you are unencumbered by an over abundance of idiotic laws created by those of you who were confused by the Bill of Rights.

The Sewer Urchin takes a moment out to refresh himself with some delicious Rescue Ranger Punch. Then he fell down.

A lot.

This dynamic dairy man is unidentifiable. To me at least. It is clear that he is a Green Bay Packers fan. However, out here in Eagles country, I'm not sure if that doesn't make him an Arch-Villain

Citizen of the Month will appear next issue. We simply ran out of room. Not citizens.

Several Super Heroes and Arch Villains enjoy a beer break while discussing pension benefits and traditional versus HMO based employee health plans for side-kicks and gangs.

Then it was back to trying to take over the world.
